The Roman Denarius

The earliest money of Rome was in bronze, heavy pieces of cast metal, sometimes weighing several pounds. Such clumsy lumps served well enough among a primitive people whose trade was principally by means of direct barter. Later they were found too cumbersome for use in a city whose commerce and political importance were rapidly increasing and a more convenient form of currency became necessary. As a result, about 250 B. C., the first silver coin was issued. This was called the denarius (plural, denarii) and its name survived long after the fall of Rome in the mediaeval denier of France. Even to-day traces of it are to be found in the use of the abbreviation d for the English penny.

The earliest of the Roman Republican denarii commonly bore on the obverse a helmeted female head, typifying the city and the mark of value X. On the reverse was a two or four horsed chariot or, as in the illustration, (No. 1) the Dioscuri, the twin brothers Castor and Pollux, whose legend was closely associated with the mythical history of Rome, and the word ROMA. These are the so called anonymous coins. Later the official or "moneyer" in charge of the mint put his name on the coins and gradually the custom developed of varying the design with each new moneyer. These officials changed every year, and in some years more than one official was authorized to strike coins. The result was a great number of attractive and interesting types, which usually related to a mythical or historical event in which the moneyer of the day or his ancestors had taken part. Such is the denarius (No. 2) issued about 88 B. C. when Lucius Calpurnius Piso Frugi was in charge of the mint. The head of Apollo on the obverse denotes that this god was the especial deity of the Calpurnia family to which the moneyer belonged. The race horse and jockey on the reverse refer to an early member of the family who had founded the annual games of Apollo at which horse racing was a principal event. Some twenty years later, the son of this Lucius Piso Frugi became mint master in Rome and struck coins of the same design, but of quite different workmanship.

No. 3.

Toward the end of the Republican period, a new custom developed, that of placing the portraits of living persons on the coins as shown on the last piece (No. 3) here illustrated. This is a denarius issued under authority of Augustus Caesar with a boldly cut head of the first Roman Emperor on the obverse. It was struck during the transitional time which marked the end of the old Roman Republic and the beginning of the great Roman Empire.

The earliest collectors and students of the Republican Coinages of Rome arranged and classified them according to the family name of the official under whose authority they were issued and this was the scheme adopted by M. Ernest Babelon, curator of the French National Collection in his book which still remains the standard work on the subject. It is the reason also that many dealers and collectors refer to the series as Roman Family coins.

In the last few years much additional information about the Roman issues has made it possible to fix the date of each variety with approximate accuracy and so adopt a chronological arrangement which is much more scientific since it brings the pieces in proper sequence instead of grouping together coins of various periods only because the officers under whose authority they were issued had the same family name.

Silver Coins of Republican Rome

The following list of Roman silver coins presents a very attractive assortment of these pieces at reasonable prices. All are of the denarius denomination and, unless otherwise stated, have the helmeted head of ROMA facing to the right on the obverse. The family name of the various moneyers under whose authority they were issued is given in capital letters together with the number according to M. Babelon's classification. The chronological arrangement by date of issue is based on the best obtainable authority.

Orders amounting to $5.00 or more accompanied by remittance will receive a 10% discount.

Hebraic Characters On An American Issue

At various times during the 17th and 18th centuries inscriptions in Hebraic characters appeared on the coins of Poland, Denmark, Sweden and some of the German states, but it was not until the 19th century that anything similar occurred on any piece issued in this country.

During the American Civil War all the metallic currency practically disappeared from circulation and was hoarded by persons who thought it would go to a premium. There was then no law prohibiting anyone from issuing their own token money. During this period of currency shortage probably 10,000 individuals or firms in the several states of the Union produced metallic pieces for use in making small change. Among these was one struck in the City of New York with the Hebraic inscription for the word "Kosher". This piece was made for the Philippa Dining Salon, 256 Broadway. It was about the size of a bronze cent, but was struck in different metals such as copper, brass, nickel, copper-nickel, white metal and silver.

Like the other pieces of the same sort, they were, doubtlessly, used for making change in the course of the daily business of the restaurant.

No. 13. Civil War Token with Hebraic Character.

A study of American coins from the earliest to the present time shows this civil war store card to be the only coin struck here bearing Hebraic letters. So far as we know it is the only piece issued anywhere during the 19th century with such letters. We would be very glad to hear of any other pieces, if they exist, with Hebrew characters and issued in the United States.

Numismatic Notes

The Pope of Rome has just had a medal struck to commemorate the completion of the revision of the Vulgate or Latin Bible by Cardinal Gasquet, the scholarly eighty-two year old Benedictine monk who has been engaged on this work for twenty-one years.

The following is from a letter recently received. Naturally we are much gratified by it and will not cease our efforts deserve sentiments expressed.

"Allow me to extend to you my personal appreciation of the change you have made in the Gutttag Coin Bulletin.

Vol. 6, #1 as it came to me this morning, in its improved size and style will be much more than a coin bulletin. It will become a magazine of reference and more highly prized than the loose sheets which preceded it.

With best wishes for the continued success of the newly made improvement."

Civil War Rarities

We are fortunate in being able to present here illustrations of a number of extremely rare Civil War Tokens. These pieces have never before been illustrated and are so rare that their existence was unknown at the time of the publication of Hetrick & Gutttag's book on Civil War Tokens.

No. 14 & 14a. Rare Civil War Tokens and Store Cards.

They will, of course, be included in future editions and we would appreciate it greatly, if any of our readers who many be lucky enough to possess any of those here shown, would communicate that fact to us.

Questions And Answers

P. L. M.—Space prevents us from giving a complete list of mint letters and symbols found on coins. Such a list if compiled in a manner at all comprehensive would fill at least one good sized volume. We will give here, however, two lists which will cover series in which you are especially interested.

Mint letters on Spanish American coins from the time of Philip V to Ferdinand VII:—

C & Ca—Chihuahua: CUZO (with ZO in monogram)—Cuzco: D & Do—Durango. Ga—Guadalajara: Go—Guanaxuato: G—Guatemala (Not after 1776): LM and the entire word in monogram—Lima: M—Mexico (Before 1772): M with small o above—Mexico (After 1772): NG—New Guatemala (After 1773): NR—Nicaragua: P—Popayan: PTSI in monogram—Potosi: S with small o above—Santiago (Chili): Z & Zs—Zacatecas.

Mint letters of the German Empire:—

A—Berlin: B—Hanover (Closed 1878): C—Frankfort (Closed 1880): D—Munich: E—Dresden: F—Stuttgart: G—Carlsruhe: H—Darmstadt (Closed 1883): J—Hamburg.

J. C., Boston. The Denver mint only struck one cent pieces in 1922.

T. N.—The United States Trade dollar is the only coin issued by the United States which has been demonetized and now has no legal standing.

Englishman—All the farthings issued during the reign of Queen Anne of England are scarce or rare.

The Coin Bulletin

We will continue our policy of placing the names of new collectors on our list to receive the Bulletin free for the remainder of the year.

We hope that former recipients of our Bulletin, who have not yet subscribed for the publication in its new form at one dollar a year, will make haste to send up their money. The more subscribers we have, the more interesting and valuable we can make the Bulletin.
